FOREWORD

Under Reorganization Plan #3 of 1970, the Environmental Protection Agency was established and assigned responsibility of certifying water supply systems serving interstate carriers. This responsibility was formerly vested in the Public Health Service, Dept. of Health, Education, and Welfare, as authorized by Public Law 410 of the 78th Congress, Section 361 of the PHS Act as amended.

The interstate quarantine regulations, adopted under the authority of Section 361, are intended to control the transmission of communicable disease into this country or between the States. Part 72 of the IQR's contains the Standards for acceptable, safe drinking water systems and forms the basis for the interstate carrier water supply certification program. Systems are certified annually by the Regional Administrators, EPA, based on data and recommendations submitted by the States. Systems in substantial compliance with the Standards are classified as approved; those with significant deviations from the quality, surveillance, facilities or operational requirements of the Standards are prohibited. A provisionally approved classification may be granted if it is judged that the deviations, although significant, do not pose an imminent and substantial danger to health. Whenever a system is prohibited, immediate notice is given to the Food and Drug Administration, which advises the various carriers that they may no longer take on water from the system in question.

In June of 1971 the EPA published "A Guide to the Interstate Carrier Water Supply Certification Program." This guide compiled various policies and procedures that had been developed over the years and provided a specific basis for classifications based on the degree of compliance with the water quality standards and bacteriological monitoring requirements. Five provisionally approved classifications were established to better define the nature of deficiencies.

Provisionally approved (Q) indicates that the water quality standards are violated.

Provisionally approved (B) means that the bacteriological sampling requirements have not been met.

Provisionally approved (F) indicates deficiencies in the facilities that reduce the dependability of the system.

Provisionally approved (O) is used whenever there are significant deficiencies in the operation of the system

Provisionally approved (N) is used if the available bacteriological data are more than 18 months old.

The Date Provisionally Approved Classification Expires is the date set by EPA for a review of the system's deficiencies and the progress that has been made toward their correction. It is not the date the classification is automatically upgraded or downgraded.

The Date Last Reported Bacteriological Examination is the last month of record that has been reported to headquarters on EPA form 162, Report of Water Supply Used by Interstate Carriers. Data for later months are available from the supply or the State.

Data on interstate carrier water supply systems are stored in a computer and a limited number of printouts of the systems and their status is prepared quarterly, primarily for headquarters and regional office use. Publication of the printout, for general distribution to interested organizations and individuals, was prepared in July of 1963, August of 1966, and July of 1972. This current publication consists of an inventory of all interstate carrier water supply systems for which the EPA regional offices have submitted a completed report form (EPA form 162) as of December 29, 1972. Classification of systems may have changed since December 29, 1972, and the current status may be obtained by contacting the regional office.

Questions relating to the Interstate Carrier Water Supply Certification Program and this inventory should be directed to the appropriate Environmental Protection Agency Regional Office, listed inside the back cover, or to:
